Colleges compete to build app in 48 hours

App challenge is part of Cable Show convention in Hub this week ◗ Gov. Patrick promotes Bay State innovation to execs ◗ Big names on attendee list

ERIK BALDASSARI/METRO

Drew Harry isn't accustomed to having thousands of people walk through his office while he's working.

But for the chance at $10,000, he'll let it happen for a couple of days.

Harry, a doctoral student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is part of a team building a new app as part of a time-constrained challenge happening right now.

The App Challenge gives five college teams 48 hours to build an app from scratch and they have to do it in the middle of the National Cable and Telecommunications Association convention going on through Wednesday. About 13,000 people are expected to attend the convention.

The teams are working in a space called Imagine Park that is set up on the floor of the Boston Convention and Exhibition Center's main exhibit hall. A panel of judges will decide the best app tomorrow and first prize is $10,000.

"It's a little bit zoo-like," said Harry while taking a break from three-hours of coding and building. "Normally I'm in my office with my door closed."

Harry, who said he puts on headphones to block out the distractions, is working with Mark Fayngersh to build a demo of their app called ROAR. Their app will allow people watching a live television event to be alerted to which of their friends are also watching and enables them to chat.

Joy Sims, a spokeswoman for the convention, said organizers are providing the teams with plenty of Red Bull as well as hotel rooms to get a few hours rest. However, if they are on a roll they will be allowed to stay in the exhibit hall and code overnight.

Another local team, Wellesley College, the only all-female team in the challenge, is building an app called "WorkOut Buddy" that lets users create a fitness regime based on their desired levels of competitiveness and social interaction.

Big names

There are about 13,000 people expected to attend the convention, but you'll likely only care about the few we list below:

- Television host Conan O'Brien
- MSNBC host Chris Matthews
- CNN host Piers Morgan
- NBA Commissioner David Stern
- Former Red Sox manager Terry Francona

Patrick promotes Mass.

Gov. Deval Patrick touted Massachusetts' innovation economy to thousands of cable and telecommunications industry leaders attending the annual Cable Show convention being held this week for the first time in Boston.

"You are all in the right place at the right time," Patrick said, touting the state's unemployment rate, which is below the national average, as well as clean energy initiatives, broadband expansion and increases in education funding.

"None of this is happening by accident," he said. "It's because we are investing in the things we know will have an impact for generations to come." METRO

Harvard student missing in Maine

CAMBRIDGE. Police in Maine are searching for a Harvard Business School student who disappeared after a night out with friends.

Nathan Bihlmaier, 31, originally from Kansas, was last seen early Sunday morning in Portland, but failed to return to his hotel room, friends told police.

Divers searched the nearby water most of yesterday, but did not find him by press time.

Bihlmaier was scheduled to graduate Thursday. His wife is expecting the couple's first child. METRO/BOSTON.COM

Court rules BU student must pay

BOSTON. The U.S. Supreme Court left intact a $675,000 jury verdict against a Boston University student who downloaded 30 songs from the Internet without paying and redistributed them thousands of times.

The court, without comment, refused to hear Joel Tenenbaum's challenge to a law that let the recording industry collect thousands of dollars from individuals for such downloading. The jury was told to impose damages, set by U.S. copyright law, of between $750 and $150,000 per violation. Jurors set a rate of $22,500 for each of 30 songs he downloaded.

Tenenbaum said individual downloaders who don't make money from sharing songs shouldn't be treated the same as companies whose business is to steal copyrighted content. BLOOMBERG

T police plan app launch

BOSTON. MBTA Police are set to launch a crime-fighting app.

The free iPhone "See Say" app launched yesterday and a Droid version will be available later this summer.

The app "offers riders a quick and discrete method for reporting suspicious activity directly and instantaneously to Transit Police," its description reads.

Riders who see something criminal or any suspicious activity can send police a picture, message and location. An anonymous feature is also available.

Police alerts for missing persons can also be sent to those who subscribe to help officers in their search for people. A "call" feature will let riders contact Transit Police directly.

Most useful might be the feature that allows riders to receive T service delay and disruption alerts. METRO

Woman tried to infect landlord?

SALEM. A Salem woman was charged with assault and battery for allegedly trying to infect her landlord with scabies.

The woman was summonsed to court and was not identified, according to The Salem News. When the landlord went to her apartment with an exterminator to treat a mice and bug problem, the exterminator refused to enter the apartment.

The woman said she was being treated like a "leper" and allegedly wiped her infected arm on him. METRO

T fare hike protest blocks Beacon St.

GET MORE METRO ONLINE: WWW.METRO.US

▶ Wheelchair users clogged the crosswalk in protest yesterday.

BRANDON GERMAN

A group of disabled and wheelchair-bound activists took to the streets during their protest yesterday — literally.

The group chained their chairs together in a crosswalk on Beacon Street in front of the State House to signal their opposition to the MBTA's fare hikes for THE RIDE.

With traffic blocked, police were called in, the chains were cut and the activists retreated to the sidewalk in front of the State House.

"Most disabled people are low-income, so this is an emergency for us," said James Brooks, a community organizer who lives in Brighton.

Brooks, who uses a wheelchair, said he relies on THE RIDE nearly every day to get to his job in Jamaica Plain or to medical appointments.

The group said they want Gov. Deval Patrick to veto the T's budget.

Earlier this year the MBTA board voted to increase fares for the first time in five years.

Prices for a trip on THE RIDE, the lift-equipped vans that transport disabled or elderly people on door-to-door trips, are set to cost more than a ride on the subway or bus. A ride beyond Boston would cost even more.

"We are subsidizing the MBTA," said Brooks. "It's our system, too."

However, T officials have said THE RIDE is an extreme drain on funds and resources, especially as the population ages. THE RIDE costs the T $122 million annually and is increasing at 16 percent each year.

The increase

The MBTA's budget included fare hikes for subway, bus and RIDE users.

- $2: Current price of THE RIDE
- $4: Proposed increase of RIDE cost
- $5: Proposed increase of RIDE cost for trip outside the T's coverage area

Cops: DNA used to arrest Green Line sex attacker

Man allegedly ejaculated on 23-year-old woman riding B train in 2004
Prosecutors indicted his DNA Suspect accused in similar D.C. attack

Prosecutors and police are crediting the indictment of a DNA sample with the capture of a man who allegedly ejaculated on a woman while on a Green Line train eight years ago.

Timothy Day, 52, of Maryland, pleaded not guilty in Suffolk Superior Court yesterday. He was charged with indecent assault and battery.

Authorities said Day and the woman were riding a B train crowded with Red Sox fans on their way to Fenway Park in 2004. The woman, then 23, said she felt a man with an erection standing behind her.

The man fled before the woman was able to identify him and she then noticed a white liquid running down her leg and on her purse.

$1,500

A clerk magistrate set Day's bail at $1,500 cash. He was expected to be released after posting that yesterday.

"She went home and washed her pants," said Tara Burdman, an assistant district attorney. "The next morning she notified Transit Police who recovered her bag."

The bag was given to the Boston Police Crime Lab, which identified the liquid as semen.

A database revealed the DNA was the same in a similar 2002 attack on a train in Washington, D.C., but the man was unknown in that attack as well.

Prosecutors from Suffolk County District Attorney Daniel Conley's office in 2005 indicted the DNA associated with the attack as "John Doe."

Last year, authorities received a database match on the DNA after Day was convicted of a federal crime and required to submit a DNA sample.

Day was arrested by Metro Transit Police last week and turned himself in to police yesterday for the B train attack.

"This new science has proven to be another useful tool," said Transit Police Deputy Chief Lewis Best. "The riding public should know we will use whatever means possible to identify and apprehend and prosecute criminals that engage in this type of behavior."

Indicting DNA

Prosecutors in Massachusetts have indicted multiple DNA samples without knowing to whom they belong as a tool to ensure prosecution.

- The first time DNA was indicted in the Bay State was for a 1991 rape case.
- Prosecutors in 2006 indicted the DNA profile as "John Doe."
- The move to indict DNA without having a specific suspect led to a 2010 Supreme Judicial Court ruling that upheld the practice.

Putin packs country with loyal ranks

MOSCOW. Russian President Vladimir Putin unveiled a government dominated by loyalists yesterday, tightening his grip on the economy and national security after protests and limiting Prime Minister Dmitry Medvedev's ability to pursue market reforms.

Putin, 59, opted for continuity by retaining his ally Igor Shuvalov as first deputy prime minister in charge of economic policy, while Igor Sechin will remain his energy chief in a role outside the government.

Putin has faced the biggest protests since he was first elected president in 2000. REUTERS

Banker endorsement: Dimon can fix JPMorgan

NEW YORK. JPMorgan Chase & Co. Chief Executive Officer Jamie Dimon has the experience needed to manage the fallout from trading losses, and market disruptions haven't been serious, Bank of America Corp. CEO Brian Moynihan said yesterday.

Trading didn't freeze and markets behaved "reasonably well" given the circumstances after Dimon disclosed at least $2 billion in trading losses at JPMorgan's chief investment office, Moynihan said at a Manhattan investor conference. Dimon has shown he's got the skills to handle the affair, said Moynihan, whose Charlotte, N.C.-based bank ranks second by assets behind JPMorgan. BLOOMBERG

Romney pal plays defense

Staples founder says presidential candidate had no role in unseemly details of workers' termination ◗ Obama camp hitting Mitt over Bain days

▶ Mitt Romney has taken some heat for his past as head of Bain Capital.

EDWARD LIKSMIER/GETTY IMAGES

A top surrogate to Mitt Romney said making money — rather than creating jobs — was the primary goal of the presumed Republican Party presidential nominee when he was running Bain Capital, saying he "acted responsibly" as chief executive officer of the private-equity firm.

"The role of private equity as fiduciaries is certainly to make money," said Tom Stemberg, the founder of Staples Inc., in an interview on Bloomberg Television's "Political Capital," airing this weekend. Bain also helped businesses grow, so "these things had redeeming social value, in addition to making Mitt and his investors a lot of money."

Stemberg appeared with a top backer of President Barack Obama, Lawrence Fish, the former chief executive officer of Citizens Financial Group, Inc., who questioned Romney's record at Bain while recognizing that the private-equity industry plays a positive role in the economy.

"Whatever happened there — and I'm sure there were some unfortunate circumstances there, cannot be laid to rest at Mitt Romney's lap."
STEMBERG

"The question about private equity — and this applies to Mitt Romney and his partners — specifically is," when jobs are eliminated, "whether they have behaved fairly and whether they've behaved responsibly. Was fair and complete severance provided to displaced workers? Were their pensions honored?" he said.

This week, the Obama campaign and its allies began airing commercials targeting Romney's business record, portraying him as a corporate raider eager to put profits ahead of employees. A spot released by Priorities USA Action, a super-political action committee backing Obama's campaign, highlighted Bain's investment in GST Steel, which cut jobs and declared bankruptcy in 2001.

Stemberg said the commercial is unfair. BLOOMBERG

Ravi gets 30 days in Rutgers spy case

A former Rutgers University student was sentenced yesterday to 30 days in prison for a bias crime after he spied on his roommate's gay encounter in a case that drew national attention to bullying.

Dharun Ravi, 20, had faced a maximum of 10 years behind bars for his conviction for using a webcam to invade the privacy of his roommate, Tyler Clementi, and an older man in their college dorm room.

Clementi, 18, jumped to his death from the George Washington Bridge in September 2010, days after learning Ravi watched them through the computer-mounted camera and used social media to encourage others to do so. Ravi was not charged with causing Clementi's death.

In handing down the relatively light sentence, Judge Glenn Berman emphasized that he never referred to Ravi's action as a hate crime — a term commonly used to describe bias intimidation laws — but rather as a bias crime.

"I don't believe he hated Tyler Clementi. He had no reason to. But I do believe he acted out of colossal insensitivity," Berman said.

The judge then sentenced Ravi to 30 days in prison, followed by three years' probation, 300 hours of community service and counseling about cyberbullying. He ordered Ravi to pay $10,000 for an organization that assists victims of bias crimes and to pay $1,900 in penalties. The judge will recommend that Ravi, who was born in India, not be deported.

"I heard this jury say 'guilty' 288 times. Twenty-four questions, 12 jurors. ... I haven't heard you apologize once," Berman told Ravi. REUTERS

Judge: Sandusky trial must go on

A judge denied a motion yesterday to delay the start of the child sex-abuse trial of former Penn State University assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky, according to court papers. As a result, Sandusky's trial will get under way on June 5. REUTERS

About Facebook: Stock dives after reality settles in

Facebook shares sank in the first day of trading without the full support of the company's underwriters, leaving some investors down almost 25 percent from where they were Friday and driving others to switch back to more established stocks.

Facebook's debut was beset by problems, so much so that Nasdaq said yesterday it was changing its IPO procedures. That may comfort companies considering a listing, but does it little for Facebook, whose lead underwriter, Morgan Stanley, had to step in and defend the $38 offering price on the open market.

Even so, one source said Morgan Stanley's own brokers were at one point "ranting and raving" about glitches that left unclear what trades had actually been executed. REUTERS

In vitro children not necessarily due benefits

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled yesterday that children conceived through in vitro fertilization after the death of a parent were not automatically entitled to survivor benefits under the Social Security law.

The justices unanimously sided with the Obama administration and overturned a U.S. appeals court's ruling for a New Jersey woman who is seeking benefits for her twins conceived by artificial insemination after her husband's death. The high court case pitted reproductive technologies against longstanding requirements to qualify for benefits under the Social Security Act.

The Social Security Administration says eligibility for benefits depends partly on whether state law would allow a posthumously conceived child to inherit property in the absence of a will. The Supreme Court agreed. REUTERS

The feed ...

▶ Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Steve Carell is proud of his parenting skills, Albert Brooks is glad to be back in civilization, Rosie O'Donnell is feeling out of touch and Steve Martin has big news.

@SteveCarell: For breakfast, my son ate: a chocolate chip waffle, a scoop of peanut butter, and a meatball. #Fatheroftheyear

@AlbertBrooks: Was in the desert for two days with no computer, tv, or anything. Just nature. Nature looks fatter in person.

@rosie: Reading OK mag 4 the first time - kinda shocked at how many people I do not know

@SteveMartinToGo: IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT: A thing that will be something soon, coming, I'm sure, in the future, at some point.

Celebs call out Chris Brown performance

Chris Brown appeared to lipsync his way through his Billboard Music Awards performance on Sunday evening, and it didn't escape the notice of his peers.

"One day if I lipsync I hope I do it as well as him," singer Pink tweeted during Brown's live rendition of "Turn Up the Music."

Mr. Pink, also known as Carey Hart, wasn't impressed either. "I'm pretty sure I saw my wife do that same performance, but she was three months pregnant and actually sang the song," he chimed in, also adding his professional opinion of the subpar BMX biking on stage.

This is getting brutal. Joe Jonas, what tweet you? "What happened to people singing live???"

Here's the thing: The song was obviously lip-synced — and laughably poorly. But the choreography is at least as important as the vocals for these shows, and Brown was far from the only one mouthing his way through a song that he probably had no business singing live.

But as for the fur-trimmed leather coat over a bare chest? No excuses.

ALL PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

▶ It's the outfit we're offended by.

Sleepover at DiCaprio's

If you have $75,000 to spare, Leonardo DiCaprio's Malibu beach house could be yours — for a month, anyway. The breezy oceanfront home is now up for rent at www.zillow.com (and yes, stalkers, there's plenty of photos of all seven bedrooms). We Googled the math, and that's about $2,500 a night for your little "Titanic" fantasy. Invite us, and we'll bring the fogged-up town car.

Frankel shapes up

There are very few things we turn to Bethenny Frankel for advice on, but looking skinny in compromising situations is one of them. When we caught up with the former "Real Housewife" and Skinnygirl liquor founder about her new line of shapewear, she let us in on her inspiration.

"It's shapewear you actually want people to see," she tells us of the line, now available at Macy's. "What happens if you happen to get laid and it shows?"

▶ Cheers, Frankel.

Bethenny babe, thanks for looking out.

— With reporting by Mary Ann Georgantopoulos

She's thinking of the children

During a "Today" show interview yesterday, Kate Gosselin suggested she'll be back on TV — but it's not because she personally wants a new show. "Fans are begging [to see more]," the former "Kate Plus 8" star says. "[The kids] really, honestly miss filming. They've been saying, 'When are we going to go here or there? We miss the crew.'"

Sure Kate, I get it. Just like my dogs keep telling me to have a lunch cocktail and miss deadline.

Talking points

Big night for a Bieber superfan

It turns out pestering Justin Bieber can pay off. Cady Eimer, an 18-year-old Virginia high school student, has been petitioning Bieber for more than a year to be her date to her senior prom — and while he couldn't make the big dance, he did find a way to make it up to her. "I couldn't make it [to prom] so I said, 'I need you to fly to the Billboard Awards and you can be my date,'" he tells People magazine. "She's a big fan, and I thought it would be fun."

We missed you, Tara Reid!

Despite her efforts to present a cleaned-up and mature image while promoting "American Reunion," Tara Reid seems to be up to her old tricks. The troubled actress has been living it up at the Cannes Film Festival, where she was spotted looking worse for the wear while hurrying from one nightclub to another in the wee hours over the weekend, according to the Daily Mail. Reid remains unapologetic about her penchant for celebrating. "It's not like going out and getting drunk is a crime, lots of people do it," Reid tells the U.K.'s Loaded magazine. "It doesn't make me a bad person because I like to go out and have a drink. I've never missed a day's work."

Keep it coming, Mayer

With a new, more mature album to promote, John Mayer is continuing his tour of contrition, looking to explain some of his more outlandish past behavior — like talking out of turn about ex-girlfriends and using racial epithets in magazine interviews. "I had nothing to say. I was going through a time in my life where I didn't really want to share what was going on, but I didn't want to be boring," Mayer explains in an interview with NPR's "All Things Considered." "I remember thinking to myself, 'We've got to give a "Rolling Stone" interview. I don't want anybody at "Playboy" to think this is a boring interview.'"

Reid

Sunday night at the Billboard Music Awards

1: Attention starlets: Mariah Carey owns the rope swing — always will. Nevertheless, Katy Perry debuted her breakup song, "Wide Awake," while suspended in a Cirque du Soleil-esque contraption.

2: Just us, or does LMFAO make you reconsider having children?

3: Hipster Nelly Furtado: Who's buying it?

4: Cee Lo Green, as usual, had a good time onstage Sunday night.

5: But it was Jean Sok who stole Cee Lo's set: The breakdancer is missing his left leg, and uses this cane for more than a prop.

6: Cute overload: Taylor Swift snuggled up to Zooey Deschanel after accepting the Woman of the Year award.

7: You'll have to forgive us, but we adored Carrie Underwood's Pop Star Barbie dress.

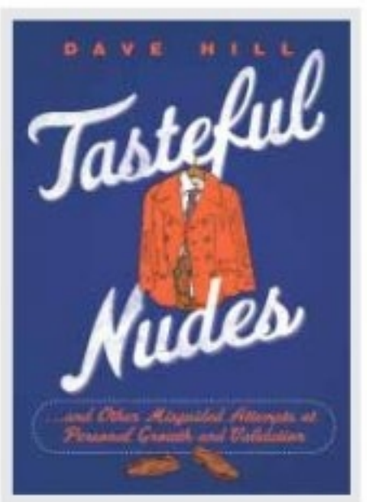
‘As I say in the book’

Funny man Dave Hill tracks the journey from child to man-child with humor and heart (and F-bombs) in his new book ‘Tasteful Nudes’

Dave Hill may have the unassuming face of a man who could give you solid tax advice, but be forewarned — he is in fact a snapping Cerberus, a riotous triumvirate of comedy, heavy metal and velvet suits. The comedian whose biography includes several long-running stage shows, spots on “This American Life,” rock collaborations with Moby and a budding bromance with Dick Cavett, unleashes his proverbial beast in “Tasteful Nudes … and Other Misguided Attempts at Personal Growth and Validation,” a “tell-some” collection of personal essays. Hilarious, poignant and self-effacing, the book covers some of the misadventures and triumphs that helped form Hill into the irresistibly likable goofball his fans know today.

BEOWULF SHEEHAN

▶ Not over the Hill? Follow Dave on Twitter @mrdavehill and check out his podcast, The Dave Hill Podcasting Incident.



You’re known as the king of metal, talk shows and podcasts. Are you now the king of books?

That’s the plan. I wanted to establish my dominance in another medium. I’ve had only like three goals in my life. My first goal was to have a rock band, a record deal and a video on MTV. So, boom, I did that. I’ve been wanting to write a book for 10 or 12 years, but I got so sidetracked with everything else. Then, I thought, “Oh s—! What if they stop making books? I better get on that!”

It’s 2012, man. The Mayans are coming for the books first.

Yeah, exactly! Books might cease to exist. And now, my only other goal is to get one of those Newfoundland dogs.

Two out of three ain’t bad. You met your goal with putting out the book — what’s next?

I’m hoping to become wildly rich. It would be good in general, but specifically, it would be great to just get the dog. I hope that people like the book. And buy it. And read it. I think it has wide appeal. You probably have to be at least 13 to read it because of all the F-bombs.

There are a ton of F-bombs. But they’re sweet F-bombs.

That’s the most scandalous thing in the book. There’s also the prostitute that I don’t have sex with. Oh! And, as a follow-up, I recently spoke with her and she got out of the business. She got in touch with me to tell me. She started her own business that doesn’t involve having sex for money.

Did you find out anything new about yourself in the process of writing the book?

The book is about prolonged adolescence. I don’t think that “becoming a man” is the right way to say it. A lot of it is about my relationship with my mother and trying to do things that I think would earn her respect. By the end of the book, I realized none of the stuff I’ve been worried about the past 20 years really matters: It’s more important to be together, as I say in the book. You know, that’s something I get to say all the time now: “As I say in the book.”

The Cavett caveat

You wrote the book about your more mild-mannered years, not really touching on your now-extensive showbiz presence. I mean, you’re buddies with Dick Cavett.

I totally love that guy. In his most recent book, [he] talks about this amazing life and all these crazy people he got to meet. If I were to write a book about my showbiz life at this point, it would probably just be about all the cool times I’ve hung out with Dick Cavett. It completely blows my mind.

What happens when the game show becomes a party

▶ "There's a thing in 'Hollywood Squares' and 'Hip Hop Squares,' that it's fun and funny, but not at the expense of anybody," says Rosenberg, above. "You definitely have to tease people — you tease the squares and the contestants — but there's an overwhelmingly positive atmosphere."

MTV2 polishes off an old nugget and remixes it
'Hip Hop Squares' host Peter Rosenberg on finding 'the real gold' and on the way he refers to the guests

When considering entertainers like Ghostface Killah, Fat Joe, Amber Rose and Bam Margera, the first word that comes to mind is not usually "square." But when Peter Rosenberg, host of the new MTV2 show, "Hip Hop Squares," talks about the celebrity participants on the show, this is the word he most often uses.

"There are all of these cool people in a situation where they don't have to try to be cool," says Rosenberg, who is best known as a DJ on New York City's Hot 97. "We had the hottest street and radio artist, 2 Chainz, and based on his persona, the idea of seeing him having fun and being casual is just awesome."

Tune in

"Hip Hop Squares" premieres tonight at 11 on MTV2.

"Hip Hop Squares" is based on the classic game show, "Hollywood Squares." As was the case with that show, which reached peak popularity in the 1970s, nine famous personalities sit in the squares of a tic-tac-toe board. In this case though, most are affiliated with the world of hip-hop. While two contestants play tic-tac-toe against each other, they consult the celebs on trivia questions and can decide to take their advice or disregard it.

In one episode, Rosenberg poses the question: "Who is the female recording artist with the most No. 1 hits?" to which Nick Cannon, seated in the center square, excitedly shouts, "That would be my baby mama, Mariah Carey!"

The contestant disagrees.

"Those moments were awesome," laughs Rosenberg. "Every once in a while, we get moments where it's this no-brainer. ... And yet, people would still get it wrong. When those moments happen, that's when I think you get the real gold of the show."

It's hip-hop to be square

One of the slogans for "Hip Hop Squares" is "when the game show becomes a party," and it isn't unusual to see one of the "squares" with a drink in his or her hand.

▶ "Circle gets the square!"

"There was some partying," Rosenberg acknowledges. "There were episodes where it was out of control, but I don't know if I'd blame it on the partying so much as the cast of characters we had. It certainly had a feel that reminded me of the original ['Hollywood Squares']."

SpeakEasy wins easy at the Elliot Norton Awards

The midsize theater company wins seven awards at last night's ceremony High honors also go to the American Repertory Theater, ArtsEmerson, the Huntington and Commonwealth Shakespeare Company

▶ Derrah plays artist Mark Rothko in "Red." Metro critic Nick Dussault, a member of the Boston Theater Critics Association, wrote in his review in January, "Derrah captures the artist's brilliant, tortured essence with haunting authenticity."

The Boston Theater Critics Association didn't have to contemplate quite as long and hard about "Red" as Thomas Derrah did in the scene pictured here from the SpeakEasy Stage Company's production.

Derrah won the award for Outstanding Performance by an Actor at a Midsize Theater, and "Red" won awards for Outstanding Production at a Midsize Theater and for Outstanding Design, helping make SpeakEasy the company which garnered the most awards at last night's 30th Anniversary Elliot Norton Awards.

SpeakEasy also netted awards with Kathy St. George's win for Outstanding Performance by an Actress for a Midsize Theater for her starring role in "The Divine Sister" and Larry Coen's win for Outstanding Director for the same play. Michael Tacconi won the award for Outstanding Musical Performance for an Actor at a Small to Midsize Theater with his performance in SpeakEasy's "Next to Normal," and SpeakEasy's take on "The Drowsy Chaperone" won the award for Outstanding Musical Production at a Small to Midsize Theater.

Last night's celebration at the Paramount Center also included a performance by legendary song and dance man Tommy Tune. Tune received the Lifetime Achievement Award and closed the evening with a rendition of Gershwin's "'S Wonderful," a song which includes the lyrics, "You've made my life so glamorous," serving as a fitting tribute to the impact that Tune said Elliot Norton had on him.

Other big wins

Some of last night's other high honors included ArtsEmerson's "Mabou Mines DollHouse," which yielded wins for Outstanding Visiting Production and for Outstanding Performance by an Actress, which went to Maude Mitchell. ArtsEmerson also nabbed the prize for Outstanding Design for a Large Theater for "The Andersen Project."

Mary Zimmerman won the Outstanding Director award for Large Theater with the Huntington Theatre Company's production of "Candide." The American Repertory Theater's production of "The Gershwins' Porgy and Bess" won the award for Outstanding Musical Production for a Large Theater, and for the same production, Audra McDonald took home the award for Outstanding Musical Performance for an Actress.

The Commonwealth Shakespeare Company won the award for Outstanding Production for a Large Theater with "All's Well That Ends Well."

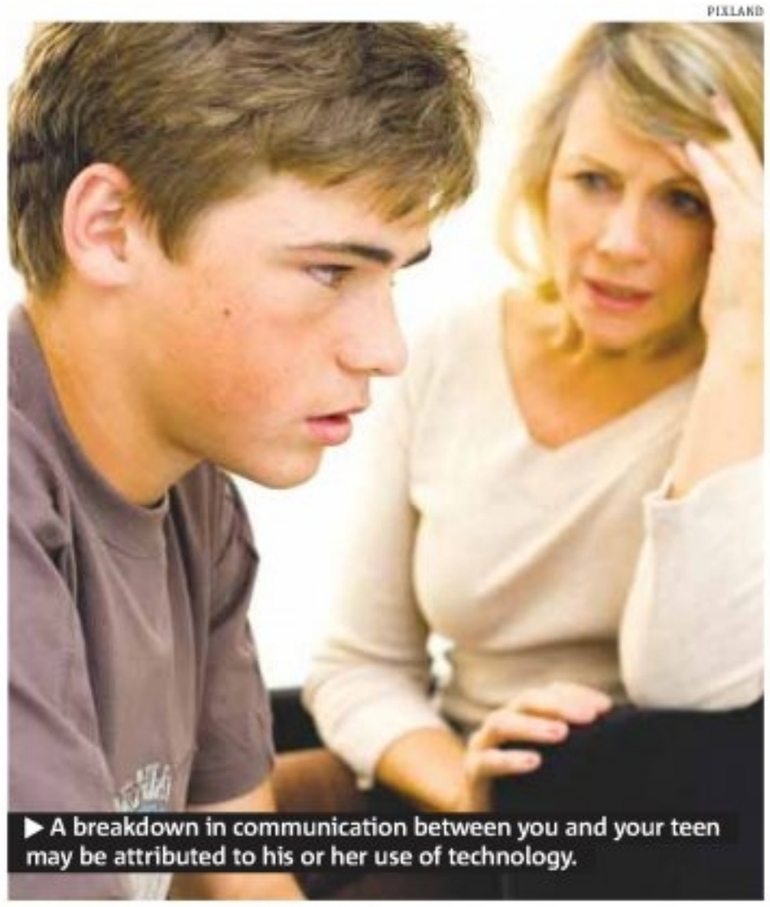
Does your teen often seem angry, lonely or sad? Is it hard to connect the way you used to? You're not alone Here's why, plus some advice

PIXLAND



▶ A breakdown in communication between you and your teen may be attributed to his or her use of technology.

Teenage years are often the hardest to get through — not just for adolescents, but for their parents as well. The transitional years between ages 13 and 19 bring an onslaught of internal and external conflict — ranging from pressure at school to hormonal changes. Young adults might shut down or even act out when they're trying to cope. Dr. Gregory L. Jantz, founder of The Center for Counseling and Health Resources, recently published "When Your Teenager Becomes the Stranger in Your House." We asked him to tell us more about what teenagers are going through, how parents can detect early warning signs and how to ease this difficult period for the whole family.

It seems like all teenagers are excessively moody. Why?
One of the things is the technology issue. We're finding an interesting trend with how young people are consumed with technology, as far as text-messaging and screen time. There reaches a point where the brain is oversaturated and overstimulated, and we end up creating a depressed brain with overanxiousness. About 20 percent of [U.S.] teenagers are clinically depressed. That's different than moodiness.

You talk about girls and boys separately — how are their experiences different?
There are gender differences [as far as] what's going on in the brain. A boy handles depression and moodiness differently than females. Of course, testosterone is an aggression chemical, so boys may be acting out more in a physical sense. Girls who have unresolved depression … the more the intensity, the more inward they become. And with girls, we're seeing this at earlier and earlier ages.

How can parents communicate when teens are working so hard to shut them out?
They need to feel accepted, understood and affirmed by us. I think oftentimes we can get very judgmental — and remember, they're hypersensitive to anything critical. [They need] to know they have value. This doesn't mean you agree with everything they say. Too often we want to fix things quickly, but we should be sure that we're listening first.

How much should parents feel responsible for what their teens are going through?
Let teens have their emotions, and don't rescue them. You're the parent, not the friend. If we're helicopter parents, they're not going to learn to deal with the three [adult] emotions of anger, fear and guilt.

What should parents do when it gets too extreme?
There's a point where we have to step in and say, "We've got to get some outside help." The biggest regret [is] wishing we hadn't waited so long.

Q&A

What are some of the warning signs parents should look for?
I always look for how long the symptoms are present. Has this been going on a couple of weeks, has it increased? Maybe they seem fatigued a lot, their motivation is gone? You'll see a lot of social isolation, where they move away from family and probably friends. [It's normal to want] to be your own person, but this is more of cutting off from others. There's more impulsive thinking, a lot of rash judgment and irresponsible behavior.

Judging Bush: Did he tank economy?

RE: "CHECK YOUR WORK: BUDGET MATH OFF": I cannot believe I could agree with Kathy Kourian or Barb Milusky on anything but they are correct in criticizing Mr. Penner on George W. Bush. The Bush presidency was an absolute horror show with the Iraq war lies, 9/11, outrageous government deficit spending, support for the U.N. and worse. Who says Republicans are conservative? Save for a few in Congress, that's another lie swallowed by only the naive. FRANK ST. GEORGE, VIA E-MAIL

Former President George W. Bush may have bled the country dry by not properly funding two wars, but it was the budgets of the last two years of his term and the first two years of Obama's — controlled by a Democrat majority — that caused our financial situation. Bush tried to warn Congress. GORDON BROWN, VIA E-MAIL

Here's a free market tactic: Legalize it

Consumers have made marijuana a multibillion-dollar enterprise. Legalize it and add a sales tax. Revenues will cover the costs of any abuse. Citizens have more to fear from murder, arson, rape, muggings, robberies, auto and identity theft or home break-ins — along with ever-increasing levels of confiscatory taxation and debt by government. Free law enforcement to pursue those who commit real crimes against citizens and property. At 18, you are old enough to vote, be a parent, pay taxes, own a car, take out a bank loan, serve in the military and die for your country — not being able to consume marijuana makes no sense. LARRY PENNER, VIA E-MAIL

Social compact with grandparents denied

May is Older Americans Month and we, the grandparents of America, urge fellow Americans to join with us to protect our earned health care benefits. Sadly, more than 22 million retirees across America have had their earned health care benefits canceled by former employers, and another 14.3 million are on the verge of losing them. Millions of us are in the same sinking health insurance boat. Retirees need to stand up and be counted as many of our former employers have sought ways to rid themselves of health care contracts with us. PAT CHARLESWORTH, VIA E-MAIL

Disturbing to see prideful hatred

RE: "PRESIDENT OBAMA CAN COUNT THEM OUT": David Bowman says that African-Americans "will never support marriage equality for homosexuals because of their perverted lifestyle." I'm glad to see that the NAACP disagrees and hope that other African-Americans will come to support civil rights for all, in recognition of their history and sense of justice. I find it particularly disturbing, not to mention laughably hypocritical, to hear some religious conservative black people say that marriage should be between a man and a woman; given the fact that 70 percent of black children in this country are born to unmarried mothers, they don't seem to be practicing what they preach. JONATHAN WILLNER, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Although your associates might have trouble getting a handle on things, this won't be the case with you. Your organizational abilities will make the difference.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Stay out of the way so that you don't rock the boat regarding arrangements that are presently running smoothly. You'll be more fortunate if you let circumstances dictate the show.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Others' hopes may be based on irrational wishes, but not yours. When you dare to dream, it will be founded on a lot of hard work.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Don't let opportunity fly out the window by being too timid or unduly cautious. If you get out and mingle, you might discover that you're luckier than usual in most of your affairs.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Instead of focusing solely on your immediate needs, concern yourself with developing productive ideas that could pay off down the line.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. There's a good chance you could extract some type of advantage out of an arrangement that has been started and advanced by another. Be on your toes.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Chances are you'll make better progress by working with traditional techniques than you would by using untested methods. Don't throw out the old in favor of iffy innovations.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. You could be quite happy working on things that have a chance of yielding meaningful rewards. Concentrate your efforts on objectives that turn into something big.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. As long as you don't get rattled, everything will work out advantageously. Don't allow yourself to get flustered over shifting conditions or things you can't control.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Because you'll try to treat others as you would like to be treated, they'll both recognize your cooperative spirit and try to imitate it. It will make for good fellowship.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. If you stay on top of several situations that could each bear their own rich harvest, the possibility for an unusually large yield could be much greater than even you expect.

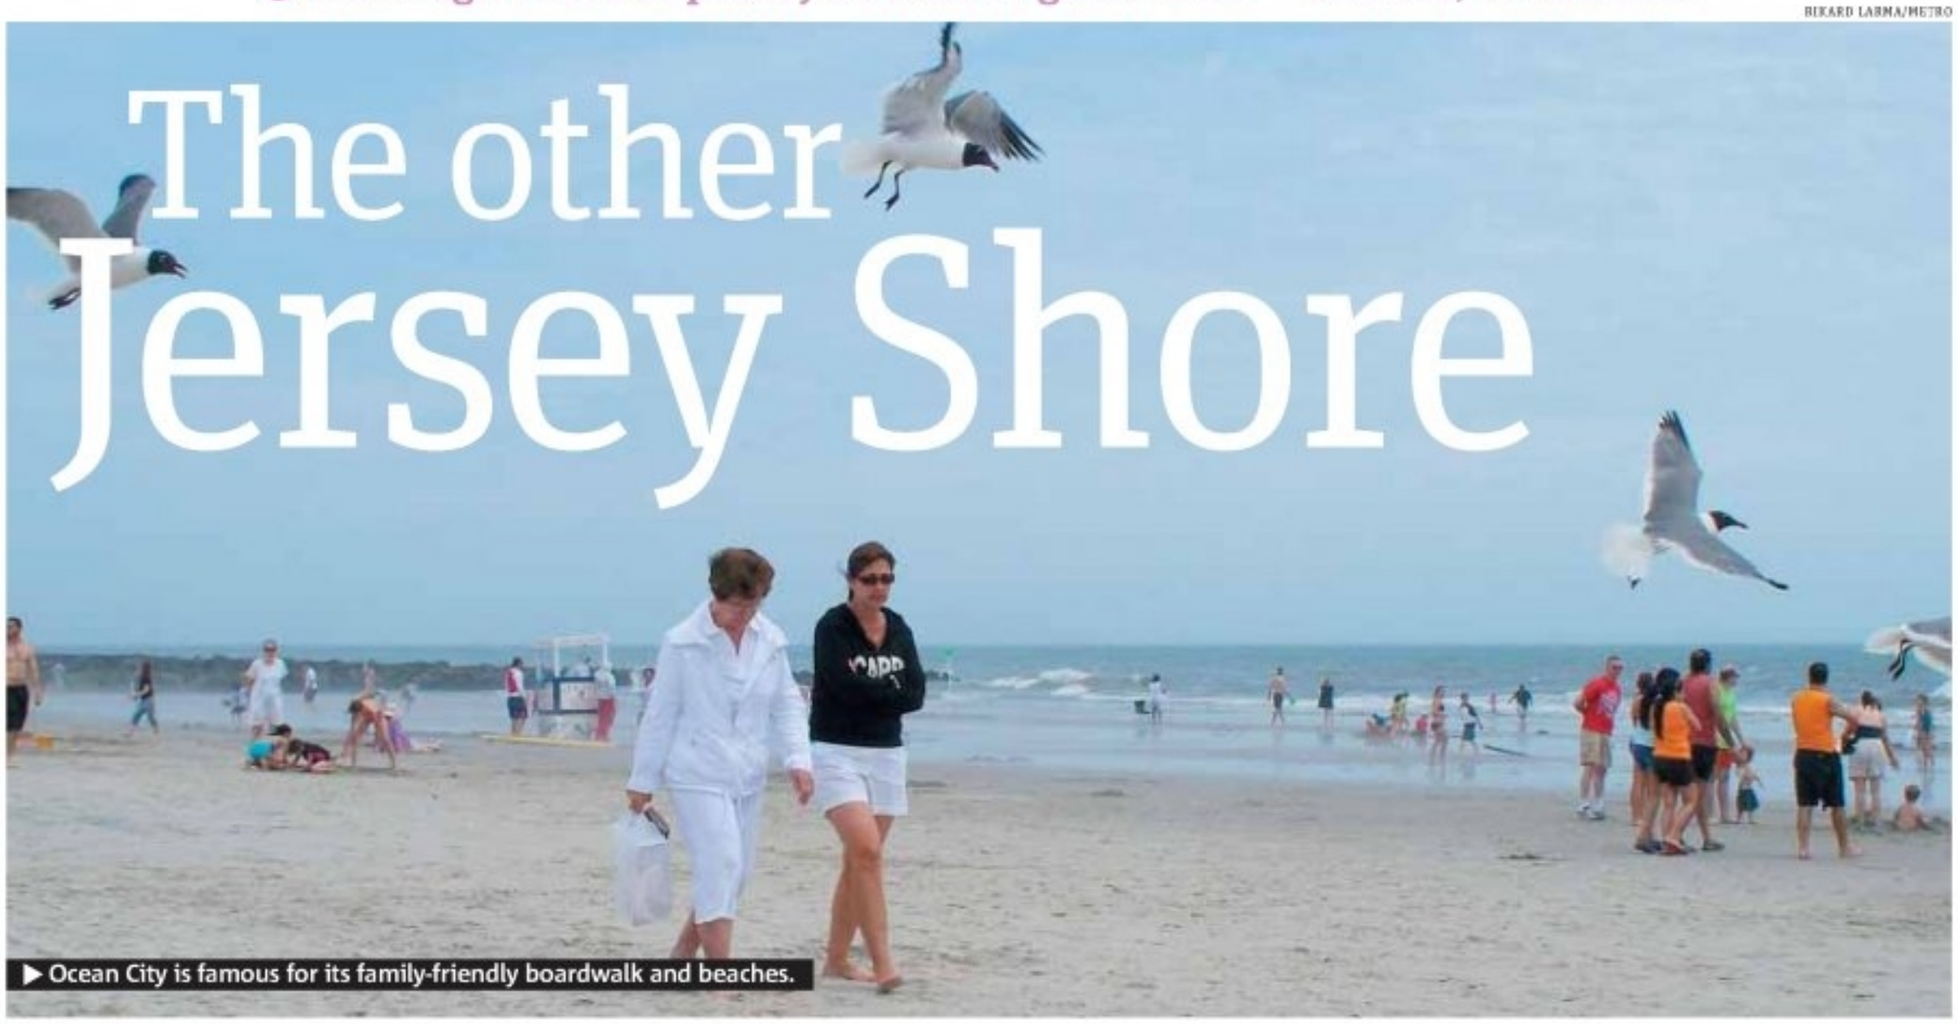
- There's more to the Jersey Shore than fake tans and fist-pumps
- Although there is plenty of that to go around — thanks, Wildwood!

The other Jersey Shore

RICARD LABMA/METRO



▶ Ocean City is famous for its family-friendly boardwalk and beaches.

AC alternative

Atlantic City is the spot for beachside nightlife, but she's not nearly as hot in the morning. If you're looking to hit up the casinos, consider setting up camp in neighboring Brigantine. The lower-key shore point is but a cab ride away.

If you're looking to relax, entertain the kids or party on the boardwalk, southern New Jersey has a beach resort for you.

For families: Ocean City

Ocean City takes its self-appointed title of "America's Greatest Family Resort" seriously. Just this year, the squeaky clean, historically dry town shot down a proposal that would have allowed patrons to bring their own wine or beer to restaurants. Does it limit dinner plans? Yes. But it also makes for a family-friendly beach scene, a retro-wholesome boardwalk and blissfully peaceful condo rentals.

Eat this: Manco & Manco Pizza is a boardwalk legend, serving up what everyone on the island — and nearby Philadelphia, for that matter — will tell you is "real pizza." Order up as many of the thin, ocean air-kissed slices as you can hold, and get ready to fend off the seagulls — they're in on the secret.

For pool parties: Wildwood

With its hard-partying boardwalk and downtown, Wildwood has long been the Shore's spring break capital. If you're not into Jell-O shots, the island boasts gigantic sprawling beaches that regularly end up on "best of" lists for their free access — not to mention swings and seesaws.

Ride this: Morey's Piers are packed with amusements and waterslides — and not the second-rate kind you usually find at beach towns. Roller-coaster nerds will dig the old-school wooden Great White and its loopy younger siblings, while slower-paced beach bums should book a white-linen breakfast on the iconic, looming Ferris wheel.

For a retreat: Stone Harbor and Avalon

While many shore communities are packed with sunburned tourists, you're likely to sit next to locals at the neighborhood bars of these lower-key locales.

Make reservations here: Headed up by a team of Philly chefs looking for a little summer fun, The Diving Horse (www.thedivinghorseavalon.com) offers something that the Jersey Shore admittedly lacks: a kitchen that's as skilled as it is ambitious.

MONICA WEYMOUTH

Stay here

While the laid-back vibe is the draw of Stone Harbor and Avalon, there's a nightlife scene for when you're done with your book. Right on the border of the two towns, the newly remodeled Windrift Hotel (www.windrifthotel.com) offers a variety of lounges and bars, including a third-floor ocean-front deck with killer views.

Van Gundy fired in Orlando

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Van Gundy

For several years, it was assumed that either Stan Van Gundy or Dwight Howard would be out in Orlando.

While the Magic scramble to make sure that Howard stays for the long term, they finally dumped Van Gundy yesterday. General manager Otis Smith was also axed.

"It's time for new leadership and new voices, Orlando CEO Alex Martins said in a statement. "The disappointment of getting eliminated in the first round of the playoffs these past two seasons played a primary role in our decision, as we feel our momentum towards winning a championship has paused."

Van Gundy guided the Magic to a 259-135 record in five seasons as head coach and took the franchise to the NBA Finals in 2009.

In recent years, however, a strain developed in the Van Gundy-Howard relationship, reaching a climax in April of this year when it was learned that Howard had asked management to fire Van Gundy.

Orlando went 37-29 this season but were ousted by Indiana in the playoffs. METRO

Game 5: Celtics 101, Sixers 85 (BOS leads, 3-2) Game 6: Tomorrow at Philadelphia, 8 p.m.

C's back in control

Celtics clobber Sixers thanks to huge third quarter ◗ Stiemsma gets hot early ◗ Bass dominates second half ◗ Allen still banged up ◗ C's will look to close out series tomorrow

Three things we learned last night in the Celtics 101-85 victory over the 76ers in Game 5 of their Eastern Conference semifinal series:

1 WHO STEPPED UP?
The news wasn't good for Boston before the game: Starting shooting guard and defensive specialist Avery Bradley would miss the game. That meant Ray Allen would start, but more importantly, an already thin Celtics bench just got thinner.
Philadelphia's bench has been dependable all season, but the disparity between the two benches last night was just seven points in Philly's favor (27-to-20). For Philly to compete, they need more from Lou Williams (3-of-10, nine points) and Thaddeus Young (3of-8, six points). Boston held them down, and that was a big reason as to why it pulled away down the stretch.

2 BASS IS BIG
You'd be hard-pressed to find anybody who called Brandon Bass a Sixers-killer prior to last night, but low and behold, he was. Bass went off on Philly in the third quarter, dropping 18 points in that quarter alone. He did it with dunks, he did it with jump shots, and he helped awaken a Boston crowd that was relatively quiet for the first two-and-a-half quarters. Bass finished the night with 27 points, going 9-of-13 from the field and 9-of-10 from the line, while grabbing six rebounds. Elton Brand had 19 points of his own in this one, but he was just one of the Sixers with no answer for Bass on the other end.

3 YOUNG THE GIANT
With their win in Boston, the Celtics head to Philadelphia with a chance to end the series tomorrow night. The question, though, is how will each team come out? Two of Boston's three wins have come in blowout fashion, but the 76ers' comeback win in Game 4 is perhaps the most impressive – depending on who you ask, of course. Philadelphia was thought to have believed in themselves after that game, but it was tough to see that resonate during the fourth quarter when Doug Collins was pleading with them to keep their heads up. Boston smells blood.

Role on

Several role players stepped up big for the Celtics last night in Game 5.

- Brandon Bass had his defining game as a Celtic as he posted a team-high 27 points in 37 minutes of play.
- Greg Stiemsma Got hot early on and Doc Rivers rewarded him with 14 minutes off the bench. Stiemsma finished with 10 points and three blocks.

In the news

Lin gets start
Che-Hsuan Lin got his first MLB start last night for the Red Sox against the Orioles in Baltimore.

Lin was recalled during the weekend after Cody Ross went down with a broken foot. Boston currently has five outfielders on the disabled list, including Jacoby Ellsbury, Carl Crawford and Darnell McDonald.

Sox manager Bobby Valentine projected that Ross would be out "probably less than a couple of months."

Sox make up ground in AL

▶ Mike Aviles has been hot at the plate as of late.

ELSA/GETTY IMAGES

Winners of eight of their last 10, the Red Sox finally had the look of a cohesive bunch heading into last night's game against Baltimore.

They also have a wonderful opportunity ahead in the form of six straight games (entering last night) against the top two teams in the American League East, all sandwiched around the first day off in three weeks. The division is so bunched that a strong showing this week could have Boston closing in on the top spot, as crazy as that sounds considering the first few weeks of the season.

The Sox used to feel more at home at Camden Yards than the Orioles did. They regularly whipped the hapless O's in front of a legion of red-clad fans who bought cheap tickets on Southwest in order to invade what many called "Fenway South." To the outsider, it was nauseating. To the Sox, it was a big reason why they were able to have so much success last decade.

My, how times have changed.

After going 67-28 in Baltimore from 1999 to 2009, Boston is just 8-10 there in its last two seasons. The bookends to that stretch are notable. There was the three-game Baltimore sweep in Camden Yards in early May 2010, two of the wins coming in the 10th inning and each of them painful enough to elicit an angry visit from general manager Theo Epstein, who was reportedly quite peeved with his 11-14 club.

Then there was the final three games of the 2011 season, also at Camden Yards, where the Sox split the first two before dropping a heartbre … ah, you know the rest.

Meanwhile, the Red Sox have taken four of the first six meetings against the Rays, limiting Tampa Bay to a total of 17 runs in the six games.

Ending Tantrums
Do you want your kids off antipsychotic meds? Is your preschool child on antipsychotic drugs for tantrums? If you are looking for a non-drug alternative, a popular national magazine wishes to do a story demonstrating a learning based alternative to drugging kids into "good behavior."Contact Jacob Azerrad, Ph.D., 781-861-8637 or jacobazerrad@verizon.net
